Dear Joint Committee on Student success,

As a teacher and a parent, our kids are suffering by not getting the attention they need to succeed. Teachers are overwhelmed and outnumbered. When class sizes are above 30, we no longer have the ability to always control a classroom and through lessons, let alone give extra help when it's needed, because we are managing students, babysitting and problem solving. You don't believe in, spend a few months in a classroom and all grades and see, try grading thousands of papers on top of it, keep up with communication to families, supporting those who face challenges. Tell me what you see, and then tell me how many months, or years you can do it and not see the impact large class sizes and lack of class options has on our growing kids, the future of our nation.

Sincerely,
Jenna Garske
