BACKGROUND:

The Oregon Criminal Justice Commission (CJC) was established in 1995. The mission of the CJC is to "improve the legitimacy, efficiency, and effectiveness of state and local criminal justice systems." The CJC is responsible for long-range public safety planning, analyzing capacity and use of jails and prisons, funding and evaluating drug courts, providing a clearinghouse for criminal justice-related data, and staffing the Public Safety Task Force and other committees.

House Bill 3282 requires the CJC to study the effect of reentry programs on recidivism rates and report to the interim committee on judiciary no later than September 15, 2020.
