Limits the commitment of misdemeanants to the state hospital to those individuals that an evaluator or community mental health provider deems to require a hospital level of care. Provides timelines and standards for the termination of commitment and transition to community rehabilitative services. Requires review hearings where the court must consider alternative placements and dispositions at seven day intervals for any individual found to be unfit and placed in custody while awaiting services at the state hospital or in the community.

BACKGROUND:

If there is doubt as to whether a defendant is able to aid and assist in their own defense, the court may: require the defendant to consult with a community mental health program to determine whether there are services available in the community to restore the defendant's fitness; order an examination of the defendant by a certified evaluator; or order the defendant be committed to the state hospital for the purposes of evaluation. ORS 161.365. If a defendant is determined unable to aid in their own defense, the criminal proceeding against the defendant is suspended until such time as the defendant has gained or regained their fitness to proceed. ORS 161.370.

Under current statutes, if the court finds that the defendant is dangerous to self or others, or that after consultation with community mental health, the services and supervision necessary to restore the defendant's fitness to proceed are not available in the community, the court must commit the individual to the state hospital for rehabilitation services. ORS 161.370. Case law has further outlined defendant's constitutional rights to a timely evaluation. See Oregon Advocacy Center v. Mink, 322 F.2d. 1101 (2003) (holding defendants have a constitutional right to transfer from jail to the state hospital within seven days for the purpose of a fitness to proceed evaluation); Trueblood v. Washington State Department of Social and Health Services, 622 F. 3d. 1037 (2016), (holding defendants have a constitutional right to a prompt fitness evaluation if ordered by the court); Trueblood v. Washington State Department of Social and Health Services, WL 4418180 (W.D. Wash. 2016) (requiring that evaluations must be completed within 14 days if defendant remains in jail).

The population of defendants committed to the Oregon State Hospital (OSH) for the purpose of restoring their fitness to proceed and for a fitness to proceed evaluation has increased steadily since 2012. In 2012, the average daily fitness to proceed population at the state hospital was 109; in January 2019, that number was 259. Similarly, in 2012, there were 0 individuals admitted for the sole purpose of a fitness to proceed evaluation while there were 83 committed for this purpose in 2018. The highest rate of increase has been for misdemeanants. In the interim, the Oregon State Hospital convened a work group to examine ways to improve the fitness to proceed processes, decrease the state hospital population, and increase community rehabilitation programs and support. Concerns about the confidentiality of defendants' mental health evaluations were also raised during the work group process.

Senate Bill 24 B* makes changes to the fitness to proceed processes delineated in ORS 161.365 and ORS 161.370. It requires courts to consider ordering rehabilitation services in the least restrictive setting possible or, when appropriate, finding of an alternative disposition for a defendant who does not require a hospital level of care. It also prohibits the commitment to the State Hospital of persons charged with violations and only allows for the commitment to the State Hospital of persons who have committed misdemeanors when a hospital level of care is necessary. Finally requires review hearings where the court must consider alternative placements and dispositions at seven day intervals for any individual found to be unfit and placed in custody while awaiting services at the state hospital or in the community.
