Honors Oregon’s working dogs.

CONCURRENT RESOLUTION

Whereas working dogs take on many jobs in Oregon, in every environment, yet for one purpose—to help humans—and they do it without regard to the age, race, sexual orientation or faith of the Oregonians they help; and

Whereas Toby was brought to Oregon as a second-chance rescue dog by the Oregon Humane Society in 2012 at the age of five months and was adopted by Jennifer Campbell, who owned an older psychiatric service dog, Baldur; and

Whereas Jennifer soon realized that Toby fit the criteria needed for an outstanding service dog and Toby began training, passing his tests by the age of one and a half and becoming Jennifer’s full-time psychiatric service dog, allowing Jennifer to be active in society and go to doctor’s appointments and the grocery store; and

Whereas in 2016 Toby died of an inoperable brain tumor, but for three years Toby changed the life of a native Oregonian, doing his job to perfection; and

Whereas Jennifer has a new dog, a German Shepherd named Fergus, who also came to her through the Oregon Humane Society’s Second Chance Program; and

Whereas Toby and Baldur both served in another way—by taking part in the DoveLewis Blood Bank “Superhero” donor program; and

Whereas Toby’s donated and stored plasma saved the life of a Dachshund nearly six months after Toby had died, and, together, Toby and Baldur donated blood 19 times to save the lives of dogs all across the country; and

Whereas many of the dogs in the “Superhero” blood donor program represent some type of Oregon working dog, proving that they are service heroes twice over; and

Whereas the Yamhill County district attorney has a Golden Retriever and yellow Labrador Retriever mix named Marybeth, who is trained by the Canine Companions for Independence to serve as a therapy dog; and

Whereas Marybeth is made available in the courtroom to victims, usually sitting at their feet while they recount the worst events of their lives; and

Whereas within Marybeth’s first few days on the job, she was providing comfort to the family of a murder victim during jury deliberations; and

Whereas Marybeth, also known as the courthouse dog, soothes the victims’ stress and pain as they tell their most tragic and terrifying stories, often in front of those who caused them harm; and

Whereas therapy dogs such as Marybeth make a difference in the lives of Oregonians by visiting

LC 3336
Whereas Yamhill County District Attorney Brad Berry has the honor of taking Marybeth home every night, where she is spoiled with lots of treats; and

Whereas where there is sickness, pain and suffering, you can frequently find a therapy dog working to make a healthier Oregonian; and

Whereas on April 16, 2014, Mick, a German Shepherd serving with the Portland Police Bureau, was shot and killed during a burglary investigation in southwest Portland; and

Whereas Mick’s handler, Officer Jeffrey Dorn, was wounded in the firefight that took Mick’s life; and

Whereas police dogs serve with the highest risk of harm, and under the most dangerous situations, of any working dog; and

Whereas Mick was a tracking and capture dog, who on his 10th day on the force participated in three calls that successfully captured the suspects, which would be considered a good day for any officer; and

Whereas police departments often designate police dogs as officers, with their own badges, and Mick was given the designation “K9-3”; and

Whereas Mick was honored in a memorial service so well attended that it had to be held at Hillsboro Stadium; and

Whereas Officer Dorn believes that Mick saved his life on the day of the shooting, and he will be forever thankful to his partner for his heroism; and

Whereas in December 2016, Hillside Elementary in Eagle Point welcomed a new “teacher’s aide” named Dallas, a terrier mix and trained therapy dog for students at the school; and

Whereas Dallas came to the Southern Oregon Humane Society from California and caught the eye of Dogs for Better Lives, a nonprofit organization that places dogs with children in need of therapy assistance; and

Whereas in addition to aiding deaf children, Dogs for Better Lives also trains dogs for children with autism or attention deficit hyperactivity disorder; and

Whereas Dallas works at the school with his handler, teacher Sean Dugan-Strout, and assists the fifth grade students as they study or do classwork; and

Whereas Dallas is trained to rest his head on students’ laps, to sense when students are upset and comfort them or, if he senses that they are distracted, to give them a nudge; and

Whereas therapy dogs’ use in the classroom is on the rise and makes a significant difference in the children’s advancement, breaking down barriers that stand in their path; and

Whereas Lila, a black Labrador Retriever, set the bar high amongst arson investigation dogs, also called arson dogs, across the nation; and

Whereas Lila was the only arson dog on the west coast for many years, traveling from Washington to California and providing support to fire bureaus all over Oregon; and

Whereas Lila and her handler, Lieutenant Fabian Jackson, worked for seven years with Portland Fire and Rescue, as well as being a response team for the federal Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, Firearms and Explosives; and
Whereas Lila helped convict a Portland arsonist who had attempted to murder his girlfriend; and
Whereas arson dogs are rare, and Lila and her handler have brought them much-needed attention by posing as the face of National Arson Awareness Week in 2015; and Whereas Lila retired in 2015, but Zeus, who is the newest member of the Arson Squad, and Lieutenant Jackson are carrying on where Lila left off; and
Whereas arson dogs save thousands of investigative hours for humans; and
Whereas the team trains daily, and Zeus has his nose calibrated and tested monthly, to ensure reliable evidence for solid court cases; and
Whereas Jen Armbruster works at the Portland State University Campus Recreation Center as its Inclusive Recreation and Fitness Center Coordinator, working to ensure that there is a place for persons with disabilities; and
Whereas blind since the age of 17, Jen has had several service dogs to help guide her through the busy streets around the campus and the Portland public transportation system; and
Whereas Simon, a German Shepherd who came from the nonprofit organization The Seeing Eye, is her fourth Seeing Eye dog; and
Whereas Simon loves to work but when at home is happy to play; and Whereas because Jen is a U.S. Paralympic Team athlete, Simon must be up to the task for her training schedule; and
Whereas it took the pair six months to become synchronized, but now they take their cues from one another, making a true partnership where both must do their part to succeed; and
Whereas in February 2017, Ava, a German Shepherd, and her handler, Becky Irving of Mountain Wave Emergency Communications, responded to a report of a missing toddler in northeast Portland, and within minutes Ava found the boy, saving his life; and
Whereas Ava is certified in wilderness area search and human remains detection and worked in Oso, Washington, in 2014, with several other search and rescue teams to assist in the recovery efforts for victims of the landslide that buried a neighborhood and took the lives of 43 people, where the working dogs saved hundreds of search hours by directing recovery teams to the victims; and
Whereas working dogs are used in a successful training program at the Coffee Creek Correctional Facility in Wilsonville, where inmates train dogs to be later matched with a person in need; and
Whereas each dog trains with a different inmate one month at a time for 18 months to learn tasks, such as turning on and off lights and picking up items from the floor, before finishing their training at Canine Companions for Independence, the nonprofit organization that oversees the program; and
Whereas during its 11-year history, the “puppy program” has had an astonishing zero percent recidivism rate, showing a unique and effective cooperation between the public and nonprofit sectors to work together to improve the lives of all involved; and
Whereas Monty is one of Providence St. Vincent Medical Center’s 13 hospital therapy dogs; and Whereas Monty spends his Mondays at St. Vincent’s, traveling from department to department and visiting those who need him the most—sick patients, their families and those who have recently lost loved ones—all who need a sturdy, patient and loving soul to lean on; and
Whereas Monty looks like a Golden Retriever, but to the patients and staff he is an angel who, according to his owner and handler Pat Bukieda, has a knack for finding those who need him the most and comforting them; and
Whereas Monty and the other hospital therapy dogs are a part of Pet Partners, a national program that certifies therapy animals, after extensive training to ensure patient safety, to visit facilities such as hospitals, nursing homes and rehabilitation facilities; and

Whereas Providence St. Vincent Medical Center first joined with the Pet Partners program in 1997, and over the years the teams of dogs and handlers have logged thousands of volunteer hours, helping the sick feel better, even if for but a few moments; and

Whereas since the time domestication first began, a variety of animals have been used to help humans—oxen to pull plows, horses to provide transportation and even elephants to work as heavy equipment or to entertain; and

Whereas the difference between most animals and dogs is that dogs truly love to work and especially love to work for humankind; and

Whereas a dog will by instinct protect us and comfort us in times of stress; and

Whereas it is important to recognize the amazing benefits that we humans derive from Oregon’s working dogs; and

Whereas there are psychiatric service dogs that help our veterans cope with life after battle, dogs that children who have speech impediments and learning barriers can read to, dogs that can sense bedbugs, water rescue dogs that save people from drowning, dogs that protect flocks from prey in the absence of a shepherd, dogs that go to war with our troops to provide early enemy detection, explosives detection and troop protection and dogs that can sniff out cancer or warn a person of an imminent epileptic seizure; and

Whereas the services that Oregon’s working dogs can provide to the residents of this state are boundless in their scope and value and are life changing to those they serve; and

Whereas these examples of working dogs and the organizations that train and supply them to those in need are but a fraction of those who work every day to improve lives in Oregon and around the world; now, therefore,

Be It Resolved by the Legislative Assembly of the State of Oregon:

That we, the members of the Eightieth Legislative Assembly, recognize and honor the tireless efforts of Oregon’s working dogs and the organizations that train and work side by side with these extraordinary animals; and be it further

Resolved, That we encourage all Oregonians to express their thanks to one or more of these organizations.
