

I have a responsibility to protect my home and family. I have owned firearms for over 50 years and kept them handy for that purpose. I have trained my family to responsibly use those firearms and have not had an issue. My house and property are secured when we are away.

How can the legislature reasonably expect me to control the actions of another who would break into my home? That person/group have no right to be there and further have no right to take property that is not theirs. The individual(s) violated the law, not me and need to be held responsible for their illegal actions. How can you make me responsible for their illegal action? How can you reasonably make me a criminal for the illegal actions of another in my home? This is a bad bill from the beginning where I would be required to lock down my defenses when not on my person, thru making me a criminal for the illegal actions of another in my home or on my property.

Greg Brown

Baker City, OR 97814