BACKGROUND:

The Hope Center for College, Community, and Justice surveyed 86,000 students at 123 colleges and universities in 24 states. The survey found that 47 percent of community college students and 42 percent of university students were food insecure in the 30 days preceding the survey. The survey also found that students with food insecurity were more likely to have lower grades than other students. Oregon universities and colleges have responded to food insecurity by providing various items: a campus food pantry, a harvest share free food market, food packages, and meal swipe donation programs.
