

There has been a shift in power and balance for decades. Plan B is the best of all choices, but is still not enough to end the rural urban divide. The supermajority in both house and senate has ignored rural areas trying to destroy the way of life with the current socialistic ideology. Cap and Trade sponsored by Dembrow, for example, who is someone who we did not vote for or can recall on the east side of the state has his talons on the east side of the state. However, he can and has used his power to destroy the state because we get outvoted every time by his buddies. That's been accomplished by design for decades. Even though the Cap and Trade as it was called then did not pass, the little pieces of environmental legislation has. Student Success act is another example.

The power has shifted to the other senators and house members in the Urban districts while I feel they have betrayed the rural areas yet say they care. Actions are louder and because of this loss of representation, in my opinion is a major fail as there is taxation WITHOUT REPRESENTATION. Plan B at least keeps some of the industries together. PLAN B FOR CONGRESSIONAL, SENATE AND HOUSE DISTRICT IS MY CHOICE.
