

When everyone will be put into the system, they will use the system more often and will raise the cost paid out to providers. that is just human nature and as funds go down you will be forced to limit some procedures and put them on a waiting list. England has a similar system and they limit procedures because of budget limitations. My neighbors Mother in England had to wait 6 month for a heart surgery and died before she could have the surgery. Socialized medicine may seem like a good idea but it is not always a god idea.
