BACKGROUND:

The Compact of Free Association (COFA) is an agreement between the United States and the Republic of Palau, the Republic of the Marshall Islands, and the Federated States of Micronesia. It governs the relationship between these countries and allows for close economic, diplomatic and security coordination, along with eased immigration restrictions. Refugees are granted the ability to settle in the United States by the United State Citizenship and Immigration Services. Similarly, special immigrant visa holders are individuals from Iraq or Afghanistan who were given special immigrant status by certain laws passed by Congress.

Oregon law provides for exemptions from nonresident tuition and fees at public universities for students that meet certain qualifications, including other immigration classification groups.

Senate Bill 553 provides that students from nations that are party to Compact of Free Association, or students who are refugees or special immigrant visa holders, who reside in Oregon and no other state, are exempt from nonresident tuition and fees at public universities, including Oregon Health and Science University. It requires these changes to take effect for the 2021-2022 academic year, and it requires the Higher Education Coordinating Commission to disburse mission differentiation funding to public universities that enroll a number of students from COFA nations above a certain threshold.
