Revenue Impact: May have revenue impact, but no statement issued

ISSUES DISCUSSED:

EFFECT OF AMENDMENT:

-1 Exempts applications to courses or programs where professional licensure requirements exclude individuals with a criminal conviction.

BACKGROUND:

Many colleges and universities require prospective students to disclose whether they have previously been convicted of a crime before an admission decision is made. Institutions of higher education may decide not to admit prospective students who disclose prior convictions. According to the U.S. Department of Education, while a prior conviction may not necessarily prevent applicants from being admitted, a conviction question may deter individuals who have emerged from the criminal justice system from pursuing higher education as a path toward rehabilitation.

Some institutions of higher learning have voluntarily opted to remove the conviction question from their application processes. The Common Application, which is a standardized application used by many public and private higher education institutions, removed the question in 2018. Colorado, Louisiana, Maryland, and Washington have banned colleges and universities in their states from inquiring about prior criminal convictions on admission applications. The Free Application for Federal Student Aid (FAFSA) asks applicants to disclose criminal convictions, but does not disqualify those with convictions from receiving aid.

Senate Bill 713 prohibits colleges and universities in Oregon from requiring prospective students to disclose a prior criminal conviction before an admission decision is made. It exempts applications that use a common application form and applications to professional degree programs or law enforcement training programs. It requires all higher education institutions in Oregon to prepare for this by the 2022-2023 academic year. The -1 amendment exempts applications to courses or programs where professional licensure requirements exclude individuals with a criminal conviction.
