BACKGROUND:

The Higher Education Coordinating Commission is currently composed of fourteen members: Nine members hold voting positions, while ten hold nonvoting positions. Oregon law specifies that the voting members include a person from each of Oregon's five congressional districts and four members of the general public at large, who are Oregon residents and are informed on the principles of higher education. In addition, the law specifies that the five nonvoting commission positions include a student and a faculty member from both a public university and a community college plus a nonfaculty member from either type of institution. The commission's voting members serve four-year terms while nonvoting members serve two-year terms. Each member is appointed by the Governor and confirmed by the state Senate.

The Higher Education Coordinating Commission was established in 2011 by SB 242 as part of a broad reorganization of the state's higher education apparatus. The commission was originally composed of 15 members from various sectors, including students. The commission's membership was modified to its current composition by House Bill 3120 (2013).

House Bill 2873 modifies the membership of the Higher Education Coordinating Commission to include 15 voting members, including each of the formerly nonvoting members and an additional member who is a graduate student of a public university.
