BACKGROUND:

The Sage Grouse Mitigation Program is one result of Oregon's sage grouse conservation efforts among a diverse set of partners to advance a comprehensive approach to sage grouse conservation. The program is housed in the Oregon Department of Fish and Wildlife (ODFW) and aims to address the threat of increasing development pressure in sage grouse habitat.

Oregon currently has an in-lieu fee (ILF) option to provide developers an additional choice to conduct mitigation for project impacts to sage grouse. All ILF funds are currently designated to be placed into the State Wildlife Fund, a low-interest fund designed for short-term investment. However, the ILF option has not yet been used by developers and ODFW believes an intermediate-term account would provide a more accurate cost to developers.

House Bill 2069 would establish the Sage Grouse Mitigation In-Lieu Fee Fund for sage grouse habitat restoration, protection, enhancement, or expansion, and would allow for the investment of fund moneys into an intermediate-term investment account with the approval of the State Treasurer.
