No amendment.

BACKGROUND:

Alcohol and recreational marijuana are strictly regulated industries that generate significant revenue. The Oregon Liquor Control Commission (OLCC) oversees the distribution and sale of alcoholic beverages, and businesses and personnel that serve alcohol; it regulates the production, processing, transport and sale of recreational marijuana, as well as the sale of medical products through retail marijuana stores to medical marijuana cardholders; and it enforces Oregon's Bottle Bill. The OLCC is comprised of seven members appointed by the Governor and confirmed by the Senate. Currently, among other qualifications and limitations, members must represent the residents of each of Oregon's congressional districts; one must be from eastern Oregon and one from western Oregon; and one must be from the retail food and alcoholic beverage industry.

House Bill 2758 A additionally requires at least two members of the OLCC to have backgrounds in public health.
