BACKGROUND:

According to data provided by the National Council on Homelessness (2020), Oregon's rate of homeless individuals is one of the highest in the nation, with 15,876 individuals who are homeless on a given night, or an average of 37.9 per 10,000 people in the general population. According to Oregon Housing and Community Services, Oregon ranks fourth highest in the nation for youth experiencing homelessness and chronic homelessness. A 2019 study by the Oregon Community Foundation found that Black and Indigenous Oregonians are disproportionately represented in the homeless population, with a share of the homeless population that is more than three times higher than these groups' representation in the general population.

The health and economic impacts of the COVID-19 crisis, as well as individuals and families displaced by last year's wildfires, underscores the need for safe shelter, housing, and supportive services to meet the needs of a growing homeless population. The community action agency network, established initially under the federal Economic Opportunity Act of 1964, has served as Oregon's centralized delivery system for federal antipoverty programs, including services for individuals who are homeless or at risk of becoming homeless. State and federal moneys for various housing stabilization programs flow through nonprofit, community action agencies, or CAAs, which have geographically defined services areas throughout the state.

House Bill 2100 A clarifies Oregon Housing and Community Services' role and responsibilities in administering federal antipoverty programs, including the Emergency Housing Assistance Program and State Homeless Assistance Program. It requires the agency to consult with specified entities in grant administration, and clarifies that eligible grantees must demonstrate culturally responsive services to best serve the needs of diverse client populations, including communities of color. It establishes the Task Force on Homelessness and Racial Disparities to address racial disparities in the provision of and access to homeless services programs across the state.
