

It is time that we take an active role in teaching our next generation to understand the deep harm caused by racism in this country. We can wait no longer to start educating our young people about the full history of our state and nation.

As a career educator I understand that opening minds is the most powerful way to create a strong democracy. Nothing is more powerful than education to make cultural change and provide opportunities for prosperity, safety and responsible citizenship.