

Generational poverty has hindered the full potential of the U.S. economy. The time is now to stimulate the economy through trickle-up economics and targeting decedents of slaves is ideal and delivers the largest possible proportional impact one could hope for.