

Speaking as a regular transit rider, I feel there is no need for the task of fare inspection to be performed by armed, sworn officers. That's a misallocation of time, money and skills and a potential threat to both the physical safety and the appeal of public transit.