

This bill violates the rights of private schools to practice and live out the free exercise of religion. The ability for the state to have control and jurisdiction over private schools violates constitutional rights. Private schools should not be subject to public school's educational agendas. The blurring of lines is dangerous to the identity of both public and private schools.