

Ranked choice voting increases democracy, by extending the impact of a voter's vote and better representing his or her positions and wishes. It diminishes the toxic effect of the two party system and leads to more considered, less party line voting. It decreases the cost of any potential runoffs, is likely to decrease negative campaigning, and will probably increase participation. I do not see any downsides.