

If animals, in this case elk, live in an area prior to people wanting to use the land - it's not right to kill the elk even if they are considered a "nuisance". The land developers should take the previous residents into consideration prior to developing the land.