

Killing coyotes in contests is completely barbaric. It was barbaric to do it to wolves and it is still now. There is no science to support killing something like this, in fact there is science against it (see Defenders of Wildlife literature). At the very least, Coyotes help with rodent population control, rodents spread diseases, so at least look at this from the stand point of utility in managing our shared public resources.