

Early Childhood Education programs provide comprehensive education, health, and social services during critical times of human and family development. Early learning and family services during the childhood years and early stages of family development can prevent or intervene in adverse life experiences, such as parental divorce, incarceration and mental health problems, thereby improving the livelihood and lifespan of those impacted and the community at large.