

The goal is for our autistic son to be an independent and functioning adult in society.

With the support of early intervention services, he has been making progress towards that goal for two years now. Early intervention isn't just educating our son, it's training us as parents in an area that few other parents can give working advise for.