

Lucky for me I dont live in town so when the rolling blackouts occur I will be able to survive. You want dams removed, cars and trucks go electric ect. Where will All this power be coming from, have any ideas at all? No one has really thought this thru and I doubt anyone will, just jam it thru and hope for the best. Look what happened in Texas if you think this cant happen in Oregon guess again. You do realize most Oregonians live out of the city and the local bus doesnt stop at the door. Whenever there is a severe cold or heat event there is an overwhelming power draw that could go critical. Please think this thru carefully before any decisions are made in haste.
