

Across the state, law enforcement agencies have amassed considerable stockpiles of militarized weapons and equipment. These weapons of war have little or no functional use in local law enforcement. This militarization of police has created distrust in our communities and has led to disproportionate uses of force, and community presence, by enforcement agencies. It's about time the people of Oregon have oversight over the tools their enforcement agencies utilize.