

I support the right to rest bill. The treatment of people experiencing homelessness has been shameful, and this bill is one tiny step in the right direction. The real work though, lies in dismantling systemic racism, classism and the false narrative of a merit society. People are in these circumstances because our society is designed for a few to "succeed", the majority to "get by", and the rest to "fail". And when they do "fail", we have the audacity to blame them personally. This is the height of hypocrisy, in the toxically rigged system which we find ourselves.
