

As much as Democrat politicians may like it or not, the 2nd amendment is just as valid and important as the 1st amendment. What if you had to get permission to make some political statement? What if some government agency had to review your free speech and decide if it was okay for you to say it or not? What if that agency could just wait as long as they wanted to respond, or just never respond? What good is your free speech than? How would you like that?

Would you protest? Would you burn down buildings? Would you call out AntiFa to vandalize and riot? I bet you would.

You're not back ground checking just the scary black guns, you're BGC ALL guns. What if EVERYTHING YOU SAID had to be checked and approved and you had to wait for the approval to come back or never come back before you could say it?

You people are starting to stray into areas that clearly violate the constitution here now. We know you're not stupid. We know that you know what you're doing and where you're going. We don't appreciate your judicial and bureaucratic slight of hand games with our rights. It's not just un-American, it's anti-rights.

You Democrats want to pass and protect more and more new rights, but restrict and remove existing ones. The constitution is all signed and sealed. It's a done deal. If you don't like it, GTFO.
