

A heart attack happened early this year and the prescription was so expensive that the medication had to be ordered through a pharmacy in another state.