

Hello mr, & mrs. government people.

I am a simple resident of Springfield, Or. but if there's one thing i hate its an improperly trimmed bush. I hate the way the ugly brown sticks poke through what should be lush green leaves. Like my neighbor morice's. god i hate morice, makes a shit fruit cake and couldn't trim a bush to save her life.

but anyways back to the topic at hand. If you change this test and make it easier for any old bum to become something as vital to our society as a landscaper, than what have we become as a people, as a nation. without this invaluable skill test, we will be subjecting ourselves to patchy lawns and ugly trees. so please, for all our people, i beg of you do not make a rash decision for something so monumentally important. Do what is right and protect the integrity of the noble landscaper, protect our eyes.
thank you, Bob Jhones
