

Well, this is a clear as mud-does this wording mean that only certified mental health practitioners can treat for mental health issues, if it passes, and, does this stop general practitioner medical doctors other than mental health specialists from treating patients with mental health meds? No general practitioner should be allowed to treat mental health issues, with their frankenmeds-I learned the hard way-going to medical doctors with physical pain and was given one anti-this or that meds which they used the excuse it would interrupt pain signals-instead, made me A BLITHERING IDIOT, ON TOP OF, AND IN ADDITION TO THE PAIN. The way it is put sounds like it...If so, -this will never pass-medical doctors want the profits. On the other hand, the wording may be read as this may be focused just for the specific reason that unlicensed people are taking those profits from the licensed professionals, which takes away alternative choices, for the profits of big pharma and, in that case, alternative avenues are doomed-and rights of choice by individuals, for alternative treatments are violated, and taken away. It is not well worded and looks very convoluted.
