

My step-son's independent life is made possible by his in-home support staff. He bonds with them and change is very difficult for him. The low wages paid for this service mean people have to move on when other higher-paying positions open up. Raising their wages would lend stability to his life.