BACKGROUND:

Approximately nine million American service men and women served during the Vietnam War era; an estimated total of 180,000 were Oregonians. A local memorial honoring Vietnam War veterans of Oregon was dedicated in 1987 in Washington Park in Portland. A number of local governments have authorized the installation of Vietnam War memorials including Beaverton, Bend, Canby, Eagle Point, Enterprise, Eugene, Richland, Rogue River, and Salem.

State-sanctioned memorials and monuments on the grounds of the State Capitol include: a replica of the Liberty Bell outside the west entrance; statues of Jason Lee, John McLoughlin, and a Circuit Rider on the east side of the Capitol; memorials to the state's Medal of Honor recipients surrounding the U.S. flag and state flag; the Walk of the Flags of the 50 states and nine federally recognized Native American tribes west of the Capitol; the Sprague Fountain just west of the Walk of the Flags; and the Oregon World War II Memorial in the northwest corner of the grounds surrounding the Capitol Building.

Senate Bill 319 dedicates a portion of State Capitol State Park grounds for a Vietnam War memorial, to be funded and installed by a nonprofit organization dedicated to its establishment.
