BACKGROUND:

The production, processing, and sale of marijuana and hemp is legal under Oregon law. The Oregon Liquor and Cannabis Commission (OLCC) has primary responsibility for regulating marijuana while the Oregon Department of Agriculture (ODA) regulates hemp. To produce marijuana or hemp, the grower must be licensed by the regulating agency. There is currently no restriction on how many production licenses can be issued though a moratorium on the issuance of new marijuana production licenses was in place between 2019 and January 2, 2022 (See SB 218, 2019). Processors, wholesalers, and retailers are also subject to licensing requirements. Marijuana and hemp must be tested at several stages, both for contamination, and, in the case of hemp, to ensure the concentration of THC is not above the .3 percent limit imposed by state and federal law.

House Bill 4016 prohibits OLCC and ODA from issuing new marijuana and hemp production licenses and makes other changes to the laws regulating cannabis in Oregon.
