BACKGROUND:

During 2021, legislators created a work group to review issues relating to labor shortages in Oregon schools. According to the Oregon Employment Department (OED), schools are currently competing for workers with a variety of other industries that may provide lower-stress or lower-risk environments. As other industries raise wages, Oregon's schools are finding it difficult to compete. During the summer of 2021, Oregon's school districts reported over 1,820 job vacancies to the employment department, 85 percent of which required education beyond a high school diploma. Oregon has an overall three-year attrition rate for teachers of approximately 36 percent, with higher rates for teachers of color. The Teacher Standards and Practices Commission reports a total of 66,000 active teaching licenses in its system. However, current employment figures indicate that only about 34,000 teachers are working in Oregon's schools.

HB 4030 -2 STAFF MEASURE SUMMARY

Due to a widely reported shortage of substitute teachers, many teachers have been asked to substitute in other classes during their planning and preparation periods. Districts throughout the state are adding non-contact days in which students stay home in order to provide increased planning time for teachers.

In the work group meetings, participants discussed pay, teachers spoke about the difficulty of meeting professional development requirements during the current workforce shortage, the challenges of lost planning time, and both substitute teachers and classified staff reported being charged by districts for training required for their jobs. The provisions in HB 4030-2 represent some of the work group's policy choices for short-term fixes to ease conditions for the state's education workforce.
