My wife and I ran out of gas while driving through central Oregon in the early 2000s. We tried to get gas in several towns but could not because all the gas stations were closed and the pumps were padlocked. We ended up stranded for hours until a car passed by and took us to the next town. Emergencies aside requiring that I wait for the attendant every time I stop for gas is a completely unnecessary delay. I am consistently either waiting for the attendant to start pumping or to hang up the pump when finished. Please give Oregonians a choice to pump their own gas.

Thanks,
Dan
