Eliminating the sale of Diesel in an entire state whose economy is held up by agriculture shows the inability for individuals to plan and care for our natural resources. The technology and infrastructure is so far behind the cause that complete failure is the only future for this type of uneducated, overinflated fear tactic. When a group can come to the table with viable options and a sincere understanding of what their vote actually results in, maybe the Ag community would set across the table and talk. Until then, your desire to take a "pill" and save the earth is a real display of your ignorance.
