

Hello,

I was born and raised in Portland so I have seen the many changes that have occurred. Sadly, most of the changes have not been for the better.

In my opinion, Measure 110 has been a total disaster and actually needs to be totally repealed.

I still live in Portland. We already had a lot of problems with having so many addicts. All Measure 110 did was pour gasoline on a fire that was already burning. It was nothing more than a big blinking sign to all the addicts in this country to come to Portland.

There are actual addicts who have said they came here because they never had to face "jail time." We need to totally scrap this measure and start over. Decriminalization of HARD CORE DRUGS is never a good idea as far as I am concerned.

Stop with the decriminalizing drugs and just concentrate on having a lot more opportunities for drug rehab for addicts.

If my e-mail sounds harsh, the addiction crisis in the city has made life hell for many people living here as well as costing us a small fortune. All that time and effort would be better off concentrating on drug rehab.
