

I am a 74 year old woman who relies on public transportation to get around in my daily route to the grocery store, medical appointments etc and I loved Portland when I moved here 9 years ago...however due to the rampant drug use and lack of any law enforcement being able to enforce any laws, Portland has become intolerable...examples: I was accosted walking to the train stop from my apt to my train stop at Chinatown/Old Town...they tried to take my wagon...more the same in front of Safeway on Lovejoy...and going to Loyd Center is a very scary place to approach from any transportation...people get very aggressive when you tell them you aren't giving them whatever they ask for...I've had one that threw a bottle of something at me...there are so many incidents that I can't even remember them all. Please make this right so we can all enjoy our city again. Get the drugs off the street and get the addicts into rehab that works and not just a partial rehab that gives them a different drug to trade for what they want...quit giving all the homeless all they need to survive...if they are truly homeless by circumstance rather than by choice, then find them housing...quit Sent from mE, of course!
