

Dear Co-Chairs Lieber and Kropf, and Members of the Joint Interim Committee on Addiction and Community Safety Response,

I am submitting this public comment to show my support for rapidly expanding addiction services and to oppose misguided attempts to recriminalize drugs and mandate treatment in Oregon.

Our communities face real concerns, and the only way to solve them is by addressing root causes. Measure 110 is part of the solution by treating drug use as a health issue instead of a criminal problem. But leaders like you must step up to do more to fully address addiction, homelessness, and other “public disorder” issues.

Calls to recriminalize drugs, mandate treatment, and repeal Measure 110 are not the answer, and will only make things worse. We can't arrest our way out of this. The criminal justice system has had over a century to adapt to the demands for public safety and proven time and time again arresting people with substance use disorder is not an effective response to the disease. We are asking LEO (Law Enforcement) to take on Māori than they are trained to and as a result people have been further traumatized through the criminal justice system. We need more than two years to sully realize the effects of Measure 110. Yes, we need additional treatment beds and I'm in favor of surgically amending Measure 110 to allow for greater investment in treatment, but I DO NOT agree with a complete repeal.

Consider how long LEO has had to adapt, (since it's inception over 100 years ago), and now figure we need about 5-10 years for this social experiment to play out. That's not too much time to ask for implementation of a massive shift such as this.

Instead, effective solutions are urgently needed now. It's time for legislators to focus on real solutions that invest in communities, so we all have the resources we need. Decriminalizing drugs is only one part of the solution for building healthier communities, but we must also invest in:

- more addiction services, including treatment;
- rapid response behavioral health services and workers on our streets;
- resources for local communities;
- accessible housing and shelter;
- and overdose prevention centers.

Healthy communities are possible if we work together to create the systems and services people need to improve their lives and meet their urgent needs, rather than punishing them. I hope you will do the right thing.

Sincerely,

Beth Barker-Hidalgo
