

From what I understand the law was not fully implemented and the budget set aside to assist addicts hasn't been implemented. How can you address an issue without fully implementing the laws. Seems to me government is looking to redistribute funds to someone else's budget. It's all about funding budgets.

Let the people vote again. I voted against it by the way. This isn't the way to handle this and seems completely controlling in the other direction. Last thing we need is our jail filled with addicts and police time spent on arresting them and forcing mandatory recovery when they will just repeat. Send them to government funded recovery centers which is what the current laws states.

There's a middle ground let's find it.

Just my two cents!
