

Thanks to the leftist Kate Brown and her band of misfits which include the current governor, they shoved this bill down every Oregonians throat. They all knew what would happen but didn't tell anyone the real truth about this bill. Now every citizen deals with this problem along with law enforcement, first responders and other medical professionals. All you have to do is listen to a scanner radio tuned to any one of the emergency channels and listen to the broadcasts about fentanyl overdoses. It is sad that emergency services are already stretched to the limit and are now being "punished" for not responding to emergency calls fast enough.

It's time to repeal or fix this bill before any more time passes. It is not doing anything to stem drug use and is just like the great idea to let individuals who are homeless set up camp on every street and roadway in the state. Both are a fiasco on a grand scale and are costing Oregonians millions of their hard earned taxpayer dollars.
