

Dear Senators and Representatives working on IBR,

Since 2010, the I-5 bridge replacement discussions lack actual current data on transit ridership across the I-5 bridge on public transit.

Attached please find some updated ridership information from CTRAN for the years 2018-2022, including transit ridership over the bridge, which I requested from CTRAN. This data is rarely discussed by the CTRAN board or presented to the public about the bus transit ridership data over the Columbia River today, and for the last 20 years!

During the CRC bridge replacement discussion, it was admitted that buses were a viable alternative to light rail that would be more cost effective.

When the Oregon Columbia River Crossing oversight committee met in Oregon in 2011, they asked about the bus alternative instead of light rail.

“CRC Deputy Director Kris Strickler said cost was a driving force behind presenting five different alternatives in the DEIS, some of which offered bus rapid transit instead of light rail.

“At that time, cost was a factor,” Strickler said. “It was a driver in the discussion.” See Oregon lawmakers say CRC project may be too expensive Issues, 2011

it is still far too expensive, and unwarranted!

Transit ridership across the Columbia River on the I-5 bridge remains low, the rosy forecasts about huge ridership increases based on secretive models have not materialized.

Ridership does NOT warrant the use of light rail for transit.

CTRAN Express buses and Vanpool, currently serve both WA and OR residents cross river commuters. Oregon TriMet doesn't offer cross river public transit service. Instead, CTRAN alone pays $Millions for transport over the Columbia River.

Buses or vans can be sized to meet changing demand, share a lane with other vehicles, and maximize limited transportation real estate and funds. Light rail runs on expensive fixed tracks on the ground that can be flooded by rain. Electrified cables above overheat in summer, and freeze in winter, stopping the trains. Buses are then called to rescue light rail passengers.

CTRAN has limited public participation by the community for years. For a 5:30 meeting, CTRAN requires residents who want to comment remotely or send written public comment to do so by noon on the meeting day, 5 1/2 hours prior to the meeting.

The legislatures do not do this, Clark County doesn't do this, and neither to any of the cities in Clark County. In spite of repeated public comment requesting a better process, these barriers have been kept in place for years.

Please consider the low transit ridership numbers when recommending extremely costly light rail. What is the cost of extending light rail vs. buses? Why spend $Billions unnecessarily?

Monthly Ridership Data:

RE: Adjustment factors.

- All ridership local, commuter and BRT service is calculated using APCs (Automatic passenger counters). For those trips where data is not available from the INIT APC system, due to technical errors, etc., ridership is estimated using the average of the APC data on those remaining trips. This is no more than 2% of trips per year. No other method is used to adjust the data.
- For all other modes, passengers are either manually counted by the vehicle operator, or pulled from the passenger booking system (for modes such as C-VAN where riders book rides in advance).

Daily Ridership Data:

- Provisional data is reported on a daily basis from the same systems, calculated in a similar manner to the monthly data. However, due to system processing constraints (e.g. bus data connectivity), the daily data is typically incomplete, and therefore a higher percentage of trips are estimated/averaged. Vanpool data is collected at the end of the month from the respective drivers and is, therefore, not available for daily reporting.

by Margaret Tweet, Clark County resident for Dec. 15, 2023 IBR meeting

Costs unknown: early I-5 Bridge replacement project costs are estimated $6 BILLION+, yet could escalate to $10 BILLION+, as they did before.

Per March 2023 IBR Finance Plan,

- Light rail, labeled as “Transit Investments” is the second largest cost at $1.99 billion. Since only 1.7% of trips across the I-5 bridge utilize public transit, the price-tag seems outrageous.

Below are some excerpts from recent ClarkCountyToday.com articles about public transit use, with bolding added.

C-TRAN ridership continues pandemic caused decline in 2021 March 17, 2022

“C-TRAN experienced a 61 percent drop in passenger boardings on its express bus system over the past two years. The agency shared numbers for nine separate routes traveling over the river for the past three years. In 2019, it had 1.4 million boardings which then declined to 555,000 last year.

C-TRAN’s east Vancouver express service from Fishers Landing fell even more. It lost almost 209,000 passenger boardings – a drop of almost 85 percent.

Normally, one person would board twice a day as they traveled to and from their destination. On the surface, the system-wide boarding numbers would seem to indicate approximately 275,000 individuals took round trips last year. But, if they were regular commuters working five days a week and 50 weeks a year, then about 1,100 people were riding the C-TRAN express buses to Portland instead of using cars. Those numbers are for ridership crossing both the Interstate Bridge and the Glenn Jackson Bridge.”

Transit gets much attention as details on IBR about to be released

“In the failed Columbia River Crossing (CRC) effort, the inclusion of MAX light rail was extremely controversial. Clark County voters have rejected light rail every time they have been allowed to vote on the issue. In 2020, Portland metro area voters rejected a new light rail extension to Tigard/Tualatin.

During an April 7 meeting of the Executive Steering Group (ESG), Johnson said demand for transit on the I-5 corridor would increase 10-fold, to 26,000 to 33,000 boardings a day. His team had previously shared that 3,200 people used transit over the Columbia River daily. That was less than 2 percent of the people crossing the river...

Yet the IBR team has yet to provide details on how those numbers were created and why citizens should trust the accuracy of them. Earlier this year, the Southwest Washington Regional Transportation Council (RTC) could not provide numbers to back up the “substantial demand” claim. “In regards to your request, RTC can’t fulfill it, because we don’t possess the entire results,” Director Matt Ransom said.

Total MAX light rail ridership peaked a decade ago in 2012 at 35 million originating rides, declining 12 percent to just below 31 million in 2019 before the pandemic. The addition of two new light rail lines failed to stimulate ridership. TriMet officials appear to be on track to be short of their optimistic projections by over 50,000 passengers for just two of their light rail lines.”

Is the IBR setting up another transit failure?

April 2022 “Current transit ridership

In 2019, before the pandemic lockdowns devastated transit ridership both locally and nationally, C-TRAN had 5.9 million annual boardings. That would equate to 16,410 boardings per day, or about 8,205 people who rode a bus both ways to and from work, etc. on the entire C-TRAN system.

Looking at it another way, C-TRAN has 122 buses. This would indicate each bus had 134.5 boardings per day, serving 67 people making round-trip travel. C-TRAN financial records report they carried 21.6 passengers per in-service hour in 2019.

C-TRAN offers the only transit service across the Columbia River, as there hasn't been enough demand for TriMet to offer service as well. C-TRAN's ridership to Portland peaked in 2016 and has been in decline ever since.

Average weekday ridership on C-TRAN express routes to Portland:

2016 – 3,040

2017 – 2,874

2018 – 2,844

2019 – 2,892

2020 – 971

C-TRAN experienced a 61 percent drop in passenger boardings on the express bus system over the past two years. The agency shared numbers for nine separate routes traveling over the river for the past three years. In 2019, it had 1.4 million boardings which then declined to 555,000 last year.

For Portland's TriMet, the Yellow Line MAX had 13,430 boarding rides in the fall of 2019. That dropped to 5,290 a year later, a 61 percent decline. If people traveled round trip, they served 6,715 people a day before the pandemic. TriMet has said they don't expect its ridership to return to pre pandemic levels for six years.

Going from 3,000 C-TRAN cross river boardings to just under 1,000 boardings and then increasing to 26,000 or 33,000 boardings is significant, if that demand actually materializes. “

TriMet's broken promises on getting people to use transit

“Where are the missing 50,000 light rail passengers?”

In the past two decades, TriMet has opened four new MAX light rail lines. The Red Line connecting the airport to downtown opened in 2001. The Yellow Line opened in 2004; the Green Line in 2009, and the Orange Line in 2015.

Total MAX ridership peaked a decade ago in 2012 at 35 million originating rides, declining 12 percent to just below 31 million in 2019 before the pandemic. The addition of two new light rail lines failed to stimulate ridership. TriMet officials appear to be on track to be short of their optimistic projections by over 50,000 passengers for just two of those lines.

Travel times are nearly 50 percent longer than TriMet promised citizens. The \$350 million Yellow Line, with its multiple stops in north Portland, travels an average of 14 miles per hour (mph).

Due to the highly contested Columbia River Crossing (CRC) debate, the critical issues of tolling and the type of mass transit will be front and center for Clark County residents. Decision makers should be presented with all the details and options, and then be allowed to decide each of these components...

Crime increased

Instead of the promised passengers, light rail brought increased crime to the Clackamas Town Center area. Clackamas County experienced heightened crime in the corridor from 2009-2012 after the Green Line opened and an increase in graffiti around MAX stops, according to a survey by the Oregon High Intensity Drug Trafficking Areas Program sent to the Clackamas County Sheriff.

Last month a man was shot on the green line. Last November a Green Line MAX driver prevented an attempted stabbing at the Clackamas Town Center stop. The MAX system still saw more violent acts and other major security incidents in 2017 than any year since TriMet began reporting to the FTA in 2008.

TriMet's own crime statistics for 2017, showed 63 reports of aggravated assault against customers, an increase of 43 percent. Reports of simple assault, resulting in minor or no injuries, climbed 81 percent, to 168. Half of those crimes occurred on the MAX system, while about a quarter occurred on buses.

Things have gotten so bad that in January TriMet confirmed that police won't be checking passengers for fares, but instead will be seeking to protect drivers and passengers.

Citizens on both sides of the Columbia River have concerns about MAX light rail. In 2020, metro area residents in Oregon rejected a \$5.2 billion bond measure that would have allocated roughly $2.9 billion on a new light rail line to Tigard/Tualatin. The measure was defeated in all three counties, 58 percent voting no...

Oregon Transportation Commissioner (OTC) Robert Van Brocklin recently said only 4 percent of people in Portland use transit. Other data indicates while some Portland neighborhoods use transit at a much higher rate, the broader metro area transit ridership remains low. Since the IBR is a regional issue, how likely is it that the region will embrace greater transit ridership across the Columbia River?"

Public Transit Buses & Vans Superior to costly light rail for I-5 Bridge Replacement

The so called Locally Preferred Alternative that brings OR light rail into CCounty

In November 2012: -Clark County voters REJECTED the C-Tran ballot proposition to raise the sales tax to extend Oregon's TriMet Max light rail into Clark County. Every city in Clark County rejected the CTRAN Proposition, as did limited county area permitted to vote.

2013 Vancouver City petition asking for a public vote on the use of city resources to pay for light rail. Citizens presented the petition asking for a vote on light rail to the Vancouver City Council, who ignored the people and voted 5-2 not to put the light rail question on the ballot.

November 2013, Clark County Councilors placed an advisory vote on the ballot to oppose any Light Rail project in Clark County unless it is first supported by a majority of the voters in a county-wide advisory vote of the people. Over 68% of voters approved the measure. No county-wide advisory vote on light rail has been held since then.

Today, the Interstate Bridge Replacement (IBR) group insists that Clark County, WA must accept Oregon's costly MAX light rail on any I-5 replacement bridge. However, light rail is not required on a replacement bridge or tunnel at all

CTRAN Express buses and Vanpool, currently serve both WA and OR residents cross river commuters. Oregon TriMet doesn't offer cross river public transit service. Instead, CTRAN alone pays $Millions for transport over the Columbia River.

Buses or vans can be sized to meet changing demand, share a lane with other vehicles, and maximize limited transportation real estate and funds. Light rail runs on expensive fixed tracks on the ground that have been flooded by rain. Electrified cables above overheat in summer, and freeze in winter, stopping the trains. Buses are then called to rescue light rail passengers.

When the Oregon Columbia River Crossing oversight committee met in Oregon in 2011, they asked about the bus alternative instead of light rail.

"CRC Deputy Director Kris Strickler said cost was a driving force behind presenting five different alternatives in the DEIS, some of which offered bus rapid transit instead of light rail.

"At that time, cost was a factor," Strickler said. "It was a driver in the discussion."
