

Submitted testimony from Kallista mason, Goose hallow Portland below the line:

---

I already live in a pretty heavy transit area and I love it! Having the ease of getting around while being more environmentally conscious, helps with the climate change anxiety. The only thing that could make my neighborhood even more of a paradise is having more pedestrian only streets. Cars are loud and emit awful pollution, so it would be nice to have a safe haven away from them. I would settle through from more public transit access in neighborhoods that are more spread out, like parts of south east.