

Expanding and improving transit service should be the priority for the 2025 transportation package. With climate change, air pollution, and a rising traffic death toll, alternatives to driving alone should be heavily prioritized to both mitigate those issues and improve quality of life. The proposed Portland area freeway projects would increase capacity for vehicles causing more pollution and more auto dependency and should be rejected.

Stefan Andersson