BACKGROUND:

Child care providers face costs when opening, operating, and expanding their services and facilities, particularly costs related to workforce and capital improvements. These costs significantly impact the overall supply of child care availability across the state. A 2020 report prepared by Oregon State University for the Early Learning Division found that all of Oregon's 36 counties meet the definition of a "child care desert" for infants and toddlers, meaning that there are three or more children for each available child care slot offered by a provider. For preschool age children, 25 of Oregon's counties meet this standard, suggesting that there is a substantial statewide shortage of child care slots for young children. The supply of child care slots was also disrupted by the COVID-19 public health emergency, when providers were ordered to temporarily close.

House Bill 3005 directs Oregon Housing and Community Services (OHCS) to administer a financial assistance program for child care providers to partially cover the costs of expansion and improvements of child care facilities and services, establishes the Early Childhood Infrastructure Fund, and appropriates $100 million to OHCS to operate the program.
