EFFECT OF AMENDMENT:

No amendment.

BACKGROUND:

Currently, a person claiming employment discrimination because of age under 659A.030 may file a complaint with the Bureau of Labor and Industries or may file an action in court.

House Bill 2800 clarifies that, for the purpose of examining allegations of age discrimination, “because of age,” includes, but is not limited to, characteristics closely associated with, correlated with or used as a proxy for age and presumes age is a factor in the employer's adverse employment action, unless an employer can establish it was not. The measure identifies characteristics closely associated with age, to include but are not limited to: salary; length of service with an employer; higher cost factors relating to pension benefits, other retirement benefits or any insurance benefits; or retirement or pension eligibility and status.

In addition, the measure prohibits an employer from seeking the age of an applicant, including asking on an employment application, requiring an applicant to disclose their age, date of birth or when they attended or graduated from any educational institution, prior to completing an initial interview or making a conditional offer of employment. Further, an employer cannot include in a job advertisement words or phrases that would suggest age preferences, including, but not limited to, preferences for “college age” and “digital native” applicants, or any other words or phrases that indicate an age-biased preference. There are exceptions to the prohibition: when age is a bona fide occupational qualification; an applicant has to affirm that they meet age and education requirements related to bona fide occupational qualifications; or when information related to age is required to comply with any provisions of state or federal law.
