BACKGROUND:

The Department of Human Services (DHS) is empowered by Oregon law to administer the state's child welfare system, which includes provision and placement of children and wards in foster care. Children involved in the child welfare system may require accommodations for hearing assistance and language interpretation at all stages of their time in the system, including during judicial hearings and placements with resource families.

The Oregon Foster Children's Bill of Rights was established by the legislature in 2013 to emphasize the fundamental rights of foster children to appropriate care, services, and basic needs. Oregon law requires DHS to enforce these rights through administrative rulemaking, which may be reviewed periodically. Although the list of rights is not exhaustive, the rules do not currently provide for explicit needs relating to language and communication needs for individuals who are deaf or hard of hearing.

House Bill 2664 requires DHS to provide access to culturally and linguistically affirmative child welfare services to individuals who are deaf or hard of hearing, directs DHS to employ a statewide coordinator of deaf and hard of hearing services, and adds provisions to the Oregon Foster Children's Bill of Rights.
