BACKGROUND:

The Teacher Standards and Practices Commission (TSPC) is Oregon's licensing agency for educators. The agency is authorized in statute to investigate complaints against licensees. Investigations of suspected sexual conduct against licensees are governed by ORS 339.390; the process for all other complaints is governed by ORS 342.176. The process for investigating allegations of suspected sexual conduct were established by Senate Bill 155 (2019).

Senate Bill 218 requires the Oregon Department of Education and law enforcement agencies to make records of sexual conduct investigations and investigations of child abuse available to the Teacher Standards and Practices Commission for the purpose of investigating complaints against commission licensees. The measure also modifies TSPC's investigation and reporting process for complaints against commission licensees.
