

Discipline in Schools

When I attended public school 70 years ago the schools were excellent. Children actually received a decent education.

One of the reasons for this was discipline. Children had to obey the teachers. Disobedience was not tolerated. Children were frequently sent to the principal's office for spankings.

Spanking a child today would probably get the teacher fired. But this change has not improved the schools.

I spoke last Tuesday about the dangers of drug use and promotion. But where do kids usually get their first exposure to harmful drugs? As students in our schools.

It is absolutely unacceptable that our schools have deteriorated to the point where children become drug addicts on the school playgrounds and in the hallways and this is tolerated by the administrations.

With proper discipline this would not be happening.

If you think marijuana is not a harmful drug, please read the book on your desk "Tell Your Children", by Alex Berenson. How many of the senseless crimes we read about are actually caused by marijuana addiction?
