BACKGROUND:

The Oregon Patient Safety Commission (OPSC) was established in 2003 as a semi-independent state agency that supports health care facilities and providers in improving patient safety. The Patient Safety Reporting Program (PSRP) allows health care facilities to voluntarily provide information about serious patient harm (or near misses) and strategies for preventing future events. OPSC analyzes the details of reported events and shares broader lessons learned to support health care facilities in improving patient safety. The Early Discussion and Resolution (EDR) process connects patients who have experienced harm and their health care provider so that the parties can speak candidly about what occurred and collaboratively work towards reconciliation.

Senate Bill 229 updates terminology and responsibilities related to the Oregon Patient Safety Commission and reporting on adverse health care events.
